Research Interests

I study how organizations should design information and incentives in dynamic operational processes, particularly searches for talent, ideas, and breakthroughs. In these settings, participants respond strategically to one another and, increasingly, to AI agents. I also collaborate with healthcare practitioners to develop routing and scheduling models and an LLM-assisted planning tool for hospital-at-home programs.

Working Papers

1. The Strategic Secretary Problem, with Joel Goh. Under review at Management Science. (Job Market Paper)
2. Delegating Innovation: Sequential and Parallel Search under Competition, with Zhi Chen and Zhenyu Hu. Under review at Production and Operations Management.
3. Racing Against Automation: Dynamic Incentives When AI Can Preempt the Human, with Feng Tian, Yangge Xiao and Ying-Ju Chen. Major revision at Manufacturing & Service Operations Management.

Work in Progress

4. Timely Care at Home: Routing and Scheduling for Hospital-at-Home Programs, with Yvonne Huijun Zhu, Joel Goh and Stephanie Ko.
5. Intertemporal Reference Design Through Performance Transparency, with Lin Chen and Guillaume Roels.
